Niagatri Club News

On March 26, in spite of thunder, lightning and rain, 17 girls gathered at Fern Fulton's home to surprise Hazel Manzke.

Hazel Manzke and Mrs. Swisher, sponsor, arrived at Fern's about 8:15 and were greeted with a chorus of "Surprise."

After the lovely gifts were opened, bunco and cards were played and prizes were awarded.

Lunch was served with the table appropriately decorated with a bride and groom centerpiece. Wedding bell salad, sandwiches, cake and ice cold pop were served.

While enjoying the lunch someone tuned in station WVAE and Helen Hirsches voice came floating through the air.

After thanking hostesses Fern Fulton, Lois Klepper and Helen Harper for a lovely evening and wishing Hazel much happiness they broke up.

On March 28 the Niagatri Girls Club held their regular meeting with only 4 girls present.

The minutes were read although a formal meeting was not held. The girls spent their time cutting the flannel shawls for the old ladies at Oak Forest. They also planned to give them pieces of lump sugar. Anyone wishing to donate some please give it to a member.

The giving of the shawls and sugar to the ladies is the project for March. The project for April will be a bake sale. The date will be set later. All please try to be present at the next meeting April 25.

Stop and Shop Quits Mokena Over Night

Mokena residents were greatly surprised Sunday morning when they discovered that one of their stores and barber shop had passed out of existence over night.

Wm. Evitt who has been operating "Evitt's Stop and Shop" grocery store and a barber shop in the John Yunker building east of the Rock Island depot for the past three years, moved his grocery stock and his household goods during the night to Chicago.

The first inkling of the sudden closing of both businesses came when Harry Schoen, Rock Island flagman, found a note stuck in the door of the flag shanty near the store. The note read, "To tell your good wife and you goodbye. Baldy Bill." On the reverse side of the note appeared the notation, "The new Stop and Shop. Look me over".

Friends of the Evitt family are sorry to see them leave Mokena but wish them better success in their new location.

Snow Stops WPA Work

The WPA water main project on Niethammer avenue in Mokena has been halted again by the heavy snow fall. HUNDREDS AT OSWALD'S GROVE FLOOR SHOW

A crowd, estimated from 400 to 500 attended the first floor show held by Mike Oswald in his place on 159th street last Saturday night. The show was put on by Miss Adams and Miss Ray, both of Chicago. The entertainment consisted of songs and tap dancing and acrobatic features.

Dancing of the modern steps and the old time dances was a popular feature. A special cash prize was given by Mr. Oswald for the best old time waltz which was won Kurt Libing of Maywood and Miss Ann Benedict of Forest Park.

Mrs. Koehler, aged 80 years, climaxed the dances when she placed a stein filled with beer on the top of her head and danced without spilling a drop of the beer. She danced one round of dances after another without any signs of tiredness. She was given a big ovation.

Peter Ott of Lemont, aged 70 years who won a prize in a fiddling contest at the Blue Island centennial last fall, played a number of dances and popular numbers and was given a shower of money. He was greatly surprised and delighted with his sudden windfall.

Tessie Falkenthal of Chicago sang a number of songs which made a hit.

Norman C. Pearson and Wm. J. Falkenthal both of Chicago acted as masters of ceremonies and announcers.

The big crowd was so well pleased with this form of entertainment that Mr. Oswald has announced that he will put on a bigger and better floor show again this Saturday night and every Saturday night thereafter until further notice.

Mr. Oswald has an up to date dance hall and bar room and has accommodations for plenty of parking space.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

LIGHTFOOT IS RECKLESS

IN HIS search for the new stranger who had come to the Green Forest, Lightfoot the Deer was wholly reckless. He no longer stole like a gray shadow from thicket to thicket as he had done when searching for Miss Daintyfoot. He bounded along, careless of how much noise he made. From time to time he would stop to whistle a challenge and to clash his horns against the trees and stamp the ground with his feet.

"There is going to be some great excitement here when Lightfoot discovers this fellow," thought Sammy.

After such exhibitions of anger he would pause to listen, hoping to hear some sound which would tell him where the stranger was. Now and then he found the stranger's tracks, and from them he knew that this stranger was doing just what he had been doing, seeking to find the beautiful Miss Daintyfoot. Each time he found these signs, Lightfoot's rage increased.

Of course it didn't take Sammy Jay long to discover what was going on. There is little that escapes those sharp eyes of Sammy Jay. As you know, he had early discovered the game of hide and seek Lightfoot had been playing with the beautiful young visitor who had come down to the Green Forest from the Great Mountain. Then, by chance, Sammy had visited the Laughing Brook just as the big stranger had come down there to drink. For once, Sammy had kept his tongue still. "There is going to be excitement here when Lightfoot discovers this fellow," thought Sammy. "If they ever meet, and I have a feeling that they will, there is going to be a fight worth seeing. I must pass the word around."

So Sammy Jay hunted up his cousin, Blacky the Crow, and told him what he had discovered. Then he hunted up Bobby Coon and told him. He saw Uncle Billy Possum sitting in the doorway of his hollow tree and told him. He discovered Jumper the Hare sitting under a little hemlock tree and told him. Then he flew over to the dear old Brier Patch to tell Peter Rabbit. Of course he told Drummer the Woodpecker, Tommy Tit the Chickadee, and Yank Yank the Nuthatch, who were over in the Old Orchard, and they at once hurried to the Green Forest, for they couldn't think of missing anything so exciting as would be the meeting between Lightfoot and the big stranger from the Great Mountain.

Sammy didn't forget to tell Paddy the Beaver, but it was now news to Paddy. Paddy had seen the big stranger on the edge of his pond early the night before.

Of course Lightfoot knew nothing about all this. His one thought was to find the big stranger and drive him from the Green Forest, and so he continued his search tirelessly.

DESSERTS NEW AND OLD

SUNDAY desserts are the kind that can be made the day before and give mother a real day of rest. The following are some which will be enjoyed by the whole family:

Peanut Brittle Parfait.

Take one-third of a cupful of brown sugar, one tablespoonful of butter and blend well in a saucepan. When smooth add one-fourth of a cupful of water and cook, stirring constantly. This makes a syrup. Beat the yolks of two eggs until light in the top of a double boiler, then add the syrup gradually and beat until light and fluffy. Set aside to cool. Beat one cupful of heavy cream until stiff, add a pinch of salt and a scant cupful of ground peanut brittle. Mix well and pack in ice and salt or freeze in a mechanical refrigerator.

Chocolate Blanc Mange.

Soak three tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water for ten minutes. Add one-half cupful of sugar to a melted chocolate candy bar; add one cupful of scalded milk. Cook until smooth, then add three more cupfuls of milk, the soaked gelatin and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Stir until well mixed, remove from the fire and pour into a mold to chill.

Porto Rican Baked Bananas.

Select underripe bananas; put them without removing the skins into a very hot oven to bake until the skins burst. Serve in a folded napkin—do not remove the skins until the moment of eating. Serve with plenty of butter.

Alabama French Dressing.

To the french dressing add two tablespoonfuls of ketchup, four drops of tabasco sauce, two tablespoonfuls of chopped olives and mix well. Serve on any green or vegetable salad.

Banana Ice Cream.

Scald one quart of thin cream, add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar. When cold add a pint of chilled cream and freeze. When the cream is partly frozen add one and one-half cupfuls of

COIN, HAT AND GLASS

A DERBY hat is resting upon a large glass. The presence of the hat makes it impossible for any object to enter the glass.

Taking several pennies, the magician shows them in his right hand, while he steadies the hat with his left. He flings the coins into the hat. One coin travels straight through the crown and arrives, with a clink, in the tumbler.

Hat, coins and glass may be examined. How, then, was the trick accomplished? Very simple—so simple, in fact, that you can learn it with but little practice.

Wedge a coin between the hat and the glass rim, where it stays hidden, before the trick. As your right hand flings the coin, your left—steadying the hat—raises just a trifle and the hidden coin clinks into the tumbler.

Lesson for April 5

JESUS INVITES ALL PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Luke 14:15-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—Come; for all things are now ready.—Luke 14:17.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How Jesus Kept the Sabbath.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Great Invitation.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Excuses We Make.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Response to Christ's Invitation.

In this chapter Luke pictures Jesus freely mingling with his fellowmen in worship and social intercourse. While thus freely mingling with his fellowmen, he was aware of their inner hostility to him and set forth under the parable of the great supper the sinful folly of men who reject his gracious offer of salvation.

I. The Great Supper (v. 16).

This great supper represents God's gracious provision of salvation through the vicarious atonement of Jesus Christ. Christ himself declared that he was the bread of life. As bread is to the physical body, so is Jesus Christ to the soul. It is called a supper because it is the last meal of the day. Jesus Christ's sacrificial death is God's last effort for the salvation of men. The one who misses supper goes hungry through the night; the one who neglects and rejects the gracious offer of salvation in Jesus Christ shall forever perish. It is a great supper because its provision was made in the counsels of the eternal Godhead. It was wrought out by the Son of God and avails for the salvation of all races and kindreds and tongues. There is no one whose sinful condition debars him from this precious feast.

II. The Gracious and Urgent Invitation (vv. 16, 17).

These words, "Come; for all things are now ready," reveal the attitude of God toward a sinning race. Truly it is not the will of God that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance. His servants have been going up and down the world for thousands of years saying to men dead in trespasses and sins, perishing for want of the bread of life, "Come; for all things are now ready." God is never behind time. There is absolutely nothing lacking in his provision for needy souls. The only thing demanded of the hungry and dying world is that it accept his urgent invitation. Man's responsibility is to receive Jesus Christ. All who accept his invitation are assured of a welcome at his table.

III. Men's Attitude Toward God's Gracious Invitation (vv. 18-20).

"They all with one accord began to make excuse." They feigned a willingness to come, but their excuses showed that they were completely absorbed in selfish interests and, therefore, disregarded the invitation of the divine Host. This is a vivid picture of the reception which men are everywhere giving the gospel.

1. The first one was taken up with the buying of land. On this account he begged to be excused. Supper time is a poor time to go to see a piece of ground. Besides, he had already bought the ground and, therefore, he was under no necessity of going to see it at supper time.

2. The second man desired to be excused in order that he might test a yoke of oxen which he had bought. Supper time is not a proper time to test oxen. Then, too, he had already bought them; therefore, there was no urgency in testing them.

3. The third excuse was perhaps the flimsiest of all. In all probability his wife would have been glad to accompany him. It is to be noted that the excuses made are plausible, as they concern things that are right in themselves. It is right for a man to have land, have oxen, and live with a wife, but when these legitimate interests crowd out God and the things of the Spirit, they are to be ignored.

IV. Guests From the Highways and Hedges (vv. 21-24).

1. The anger of the master of the house (v. 21). It should not be forgotten that God, while great in mercy, is capable of anger toward those who reject his mercy. It is a great mistake to remove anger from the character of God. To reject his mercy exposes to his fierce anger.

2. The Lord's house filled (vv. 21-23). The places of the very ones who were first bidden were filled with other guests, some of them poor and helpless, from the lanes and streets of the city and others the vagrants from the highways.

3. The awful condition of those first bidden (v. 24). The master of the house declares that none of them shall taste of his supper. Since the supper represents the free grace and mercy of Jesus Christ, to refuse him is to be eternally deprived of the high privilege of sitting at the Master's table.

Why We Are Lonely

Loneliness is often our own fault. We have not brought others enough into our own life, or we have repelled others by making too many claims upon them, or by seeking too much sympathy for ourselves.—Stopford A. Brooke.

Goodness

As the presence of salt is not so noticeable as its absence, so the good are most appreciated when they are gone.

"I USED to be," said Andy Blum, "that muscular development was a man's chief asset in competing for his lady's fair hand; today we have females who endorse such masculine qualities as mental alertness, cleanliness, artistic development, personality, etc."

Andy tapped out his pipe and blew through the stem.

I grinned at him.

"But Isobel Venn belonged to the old school, eh?" I asked.

"Well, yes," said Andy, stuffing fresh tobacco into his pipe, "and then again no."

He struck a match and puffed contentedly.

"You see," he went on, "it was like this: Isobel was pretty as a picture to begin with, and popular, too. She lived over in Barrett, which is a town fifteen miles north of here, boasting a population of some 2,000 inhabitants."

"Isobel went away to college when she was eighteen, and came back when she was twenty-two. College had improved her; her looks, anyway. The young chaps around town kinda opened their eyes and goggled when they saw her at the Country club dance the night after her return. And before the evening was over, she'd made dates for every evening two weeks ahead, and had rejected two proposals of marriage."

"You couldn't blame those youngsters much. Isobel was beautiful and she had culture and knew the technique of flirting to the nth degree. It was fun being the belle of a small town, she thought, where there was no competition to worry about. And, though she had no intention of ever becoming serious with any of the town boys, she encouraged their attentions and enjoyed herself. In a month she intended returning to the city, anyhow, so what difference did it make?"

"But the month passed and Isobel didn't return to the city. Her father's machine shop was running on half time and he couldn't afford to send her a weekly allowance until she secured herself a job, so there was nothing for Isobel to do but stay home. She didn't mind, however. She was getting a big kick out of being the belle of Barrett—was, in fact, acquiring a touch of swelled headness."

"There was one youth among the local boys named Ben Hutchins who interested Isobel more than the others. He was a big six-footer with whipcord muscles and fearless eyes and a wide grin. Isobel admired him for his physical fitness and skill as much as anything. Ben played on the local baseball team, had captained the high school football squad; could do high and fancy diving, and could drive a golf ball farther than any two members of the local club. Besides this, Ben had ambitions. He wanted to be a lawyer, and was taking a night course in a neighboring city to bring about this end. By and large, he was a little above the average Barrett youth, though he had neither breeding nor education, and several times Isobel vaguely considered accepting one of his many proposals of marriage. She could do a lot worse, she thought, because Ben was dependable and could offer security in these uncertain times."

"When you are out of touch with the world that lies beyond your horizons for any length of time you are apt to become acclimated to your present environment and slip all unknowingly into the proverbial rut of living. It was so with Isobel. Before a year had passed she had adjusted herself to Barrett and to Barrett's mode of living and become a part of it. With each passing week Ben Hutchins became more attractive, more desirable. And when summer again rolled around she had about decided to succumb to his constant pleadings, probably would have done so had it not been for Ted Carroll."

"Ted was a civil engineer. He came up from Frisco to investigate conditions around the site of the proposed power dam back of Eagle hill. He was a good-looking boy, but with the unmistakable mark of the city about him. And about him, too, was an air of refinement and culture. He was different from the youths of Barrett, because his ways were gentle, his voice soft and musical."

"Isobel met him at the opening ball at the Country club. They danced together all evening, and the next day, Sunday, Ted drove her up to the dam site in his roadster. They seemed to be living in a sort of spell, as if each had awakened something in the other that was beautiful and inspiring. A month passed, and then Ted asked Isobel to marry him and Isobel accepted. They set the wedding date for next September."

"Ted went back to Frisco, and Isobel, left alone, became slowly aware of the ill will of her fellow townspeople. Surprisingly, she discovered, they resented Ted Carroll, and resented the fact that she was going to marry him. He was not like them or of them. In fact, when you came right down to it, he wasn't much of anything. There were whisperings that he was a coward, that he lacked physical courage. Isobel felt uneasy. She remembered that Ted had expressed a loathing for athletics, for most things, in fact, that required physical aptitude. She began to wonder, thinking of Ben Hutchins. There had never been any doubt in her mind but what she could always respect and admire Ben, and she knew now that the reason for it was because he was physically strong and lacking in fear.

"Ridiculous to doubt, because of this, her love for Ted. Yet the trait of respecting and admiring physical prowess in a mate was inherent with Isobel, as it was with all the folks of Barrett. If he proved himself a coward, she would forever regret her decision, would always be unhappy."

"Foolishly, unthinkingly, she resolved to put him to the test. She condemned herself for it, yet felt the need of knowing if the rumors she had heard about him were justified."

"And so, in late summer, when Ted came back for a week's vacation, he one day received an anonymous letter through the mail. It was typewritten and read: 'We believe in fighting for our women up here. Isobel belongs to Ben Hutchins. Unless you're a coward, be at the Wayland crossroad to-night at nine o'clock, and come alone.'"

"Ted smiled to himself and tore the note to bits. That night at nine o'clock he stopped his roadster near the Wayland crossroads and sat in it waiting. Presently a figure approached, and he heard a joyful feminine cry. Isobel stepped up on the running board and threw her arms about his neck. 'Oh, darling, I knew you'd come! I knew you weren't afraid—that all those things they said about you weren't true! Oh, Ted darling—'

"Just a minute," said Ted, in his soft voice. 'I don't quite understand. Let me get this straight. I received a note—He broke off and his eyes opened wide. 'Did you write that note, Isobel?'

"Oh, Ted, don't you see? I had to know. They said you—you were afraid!"

"Ted smiled and gently disentangled her arms from about his neck. 'I see,' he said, 'a lot of things, chief among which is that we—that I have made a mistake. I mean, darling, there would be a few difficulties about our married life that never could be ironed out. We don't speak the same language, if you get me. We belong to different ages, I mean. However, thank you for showing me the light before it was too late.'"

"And with this, Ted stepped on the starter and drove away. Back at the crossroads, Isobel stood and watched him go. There was blank astonishment on her face. She couldn't understand what he'd meant, which is proof enough in itself that they never would have been happy together."

London Physicist Plans to Halt Noise in City

Most of the waking moments of Dr. G. W. C. Kaye, who happens to be superintendent of the physics department of the National Physical Laboratory in England, are spent in thinking up ways to prevent noise. For England, like the United States, finds that the clatter and bang of trolley cars (trams to the British), the noise of motor cars and motor trucks (lorries in London), the screeches and roars of a big city, are wearing on the nerves. As chairman of the ministry of transport's noise committee he has had to consider modern methods of building dwellings. He finds them bad, judged by ear, and gives us a picture of what our future flats will be, says the New York Times.

There is no reason to suppose that steel frames, masonry, bricks and concrete will be abolished. Hence Doctor Kaye concludes that sound-muffling material may be fitted into the structural framework. This will be expensive and difficult. Even more expensive will be the doubling of walls and floors and the insulating of rooms from one another and from the structural framework. Lastly ceilings and possibly the upper parts of walls will be made of some sound-absorbent.

The problem of the open window and of street noises can be solved only by air-conditioning and by sound-absorbing ducts. Hence windows will not be opened at all. But this in turn means double doors and windows closely fitted.

St. Elmo's Fire

The brush discharges of electricity known as St. Elmo's fire, or corporants—not to mention a score of less familiar names—are most often formed at the tips of masts and spars on ships and at points and angles of various elevated objects on land, including lightning rods, church spires, and the ridgepoles of buildings, writes Charles Fitzhugh Talman in American Mercury. They occur when, with low clouds overhead, thunderstorms are breeding or in action, but also frequently during snow and dust storms. They are caused in all cases by a leakage of electricity from charged objects into the surrounding air, such as gives similar effects in the laboratory and may be seen at night forming a violet corona along an electric transmission line carrying high voltage.

The Astrolabe

The astrolabe was an instrument used for the taking of altitudes at the heavenly bodies. While it was probably invented by the ancient Greeks, it was not generally used in navigation until the fifteenth century; after about 300 years it was displaced by the quadrant and sextant. It consisted of an evenly balanced circle or disc of metal or wood, hung by a ring and provided with a rotatable rule, turning within a circle of degrees for measuring altitudes.

A Huaca

Huaca means a sacred object. Among the ancient Peruvians it meant one of the forces of nature, or a local or tribal god as distinguished from the great gods of the Inca Pantheon; hence a totem. It came also to stand for the abode of such a spirit, as a charm or other sacred object.

TALL TALES

As Told to:

FRANK E. HAGAN and
ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Buckie's Bad Break

COWBOYS who rode the Montana range knew him only as Buckie. That nickname is explained by the fact that he was just about the best rider that ever forked a bronc. Plenty of the wild ones had tried to pile him but he just remarked sadly "Bad horse, shouldn't go bucky-bucky!" and stayed right in the saddle. But even the best of riders is likely to hit the dirt when his horse steps in a prairie dog hole while going at full speed.

That's what happened to Buckie one day when he was out riding the range alone. His horse's neck was broken so the animal didn't move after it fell. Nor did Buckie move—much. Just his leg was broken and it was pinned under the dead weight of the horse. Whenever he tried to wriggle it free, a sickening pain almost made him faint. Of course, he shouted for help. But there was no one within 127 miles so his shouts weren't heard.

Night came and with it a chill wind that cut to the bone. Not far away a wolf howled and a moment later it was answered by another and another. Buckie knew what that meant. He decided it was time to do something. But what? Let Buckie himself answer:

"What did I do? Why, I finally had to walk eight miles to find a pole thick enough and strong enough to pry that darned hoss off my leg."

The Duel That Failed

O. S. CLARK of Attila, Ind., went to the Texas Panhandle when it was wild and woolly. There he met Clay Allison, a famous gun-fighter who told him about the strangest duel he'd ever seen. It was between two frontiersmen who didn't like the color of each other's hair. So they agreed to fight it out with long rifles—stand back to back, then each take ten long steps, turn and begin firing.

The duel began. Each with his right eye drew a bead on the other's left eye—it wasn't sportsmanlike to shoot out the other man's right eye and thus spoil his aim. They fired at the same instant but neither bullet took effect.

They shot a second time—a third—a fourth—and a fifth. Still nothing happened. In fact they kept shooting until each man had used up 20 cartridges. "There's something spooky about this," said one. "Shore is!" said the other. "Maybe we ain't supposed to kill each other."

"Reckon we'd better call it off and shake hands," suggested the first. "Suits me!" said the second.

They started toward each other, each one taking ten long steps so they would meet face to face where they had parted back to back. As they met and clasped hands, one exclaimed "Ouch! Something's burnin' through my boot!"

They looked down. There on the ground was a pile of melted lead. The mystery of the bullets that failed to kill was solved. So accurate had been their aim that their bullets had met midway with such terrific force that they melted each other and dropped to the ground. Clay said he knew this was true because he saw the place on the ground where the melted lead had been and there wasn't a speck of grass growing there.

Truthful Election Costs

AN OHIO law requires candidates for office to file a report of all expenditures in their campaigns. Sometimes these reports are very sketchy and not always truthful.

But the man who ran for sheriff of Perry county a few years ago turned in a report that no one could doubt. It said:

"Lost 1,349 hours of sleep thinking about the election. Lost two front teeth and a lot of hair in a personal encounter with an opponent. Donated one beef, four shoats and five sheep to county barbecues. Gave away two pairs of suspenders, four calico dresses, $5 in cash and 15 baby rattles."

"Kissed 126 babies. Put up four stoves. Kindled 14 fires. Walked 4,076 miles. Shook hands with 9,508 people. Told 10,101 lies and talked enough to make in print 1,021 volumes."

"Attended 16 revivals and was baptized four times by immersion and twice by other ways. Contributed $50 to foreign missions and made love to nine widows—five grass and four sod. "Hugged 40 old maids. Got dog-bit 39 times. Lost the election by 353 votes."

Great Navigator, Explorer

Abel Janszoon Tasman, died 1659, at fifty-six, having achieved a reputation as the greatest of Dutch navigators and one of the greatest explorers. But he made some big mistakes. He couldn't find a continent. Sent out in 1642 to explore Australia, he sailed completely around it and never sighted it once! Later, as the significance of his error was realized, geographers knew for the first time that Australia was not a part of the Antarctic continent. No man did more in charting the Pacific's shores and islands. He carried on commerce with Japan for the Dutch more than two centuries before the voyage of Commodore Matthew Perry, who often is credited with opening Japan's ports to other nations.

Armies Like Stuffed Effigy
of a Prehistoric Monster

The armies of 1914 had more than two months of grace before they lapsed into the stagnation of trench warfare. Nowadays the proportion of machine guns and other automatic firearms has increased enormously.

It is thus a safe deduction and prediction that the armies of today would sink into trenches within a week—if they ever got to grips—for there is more than a possibility that these infantry bodies would be dispersed by air attack or hamstrung by the bombing of their transport while they were still groping forward.

The more one reflects upon the present type of armies, which is still the prewar type, with a few additions, the more do they appear like the stuffed museum effigy of some prehistoric monster—harmless if horrifying.—B. H. Liddell Hart in Current History.

If Holy Week and Easter are to mean very much to us, we must seek to interpret our lives in terms of that Life from which this period took its rise. He who has that at all deeply about suffering on behalf of others stands very still as he contemplates the coming of another Palm Sunday and the days approaching Good Friday. He realizes that he is in the presence of a quality of life which really reveals the very Heart of the Universe.

Next Sunday we shall attempt in both our preaching services to look beneath the surface of our traditional ideas of Jesus' Last Week, and see what great abiding values we can discover there. In the morning we shall conclude our studies in Building a Christian World, using as our theme, "The Devotion Required." At the evening hour we shall seek to answer in so far as we can the question, "What is the meaning of the cross?" The members of our congregation are asked to think through these questions this week, and then to come to the services Sunday humbly and thoughtfully. The minister will strive to share the same attitude, for he well realizes that no person is capable of getting at the full meaning of these greatest experiences of life.

On Thursday evening of next week the people of our community are invited to participate in a communion service, to be conducted by our district supt., Dr. R. M. Pierce. The service will begin at eight o'clock.

The Ladies' Aid of our church has planned a service of worship for the afternoon of Good Friday, April 10, to which all persons of the community are invited. The service will center around the presentation of offerings which the women have been gathering during the past weeks, and the boxes containing the offerings will be used in building the cross. The service promises to be one of great helpfulness.

Presidential Franks

Since the early days of the nation Presidents of the United States have been authorized to frank their mail, that is, send it post-free. Early laws, says Pathfinder Magazine, required the President's actual signature "written by his own hand" but from the time of Hayes on the well known "penalty" envelope has been used. More recently the custom has been to use the simple inscription, "The White House."

Friday, March 27, the regular meeting was held. The Rehabilitation chairman still being ill, Mrs. Swisher and Mrs. Anderson visited the boys at the Orland Convalescent Camp and brought to them some eatables. Mrs. Rowden told of the hardships being endured by the inhabitants of the flood area, and as this would fall in line with rehabilitation work, it was voted to make a contribution toward the flood fund.

We missed our membership chairman, Mamie Brandau, who also is ill. Mrs. Brandau holds the best attendance record, having missed only two meetings during the entire time we have been organized. She hopes to be with us at our next meeting.

Mrs. West, Americanism chairman gave a very interesting report on the ninth Patriotic Conference at the Congress hotel, which she attended on March 26th. She attended the dinner and evening session, and as she was unable to attend the afternoon session, Mrs. Rowden who was present, kindly took notes of that part of the meeting. Thirty units represented at this conference. One of the outstanding speakers at this meeting was Mrs. Arthur Williams, president of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Mrs. Damerel, Community Service chairman, has made arrangements with the Mayor of Blue Island to conduct a Safety Council meeting at the school auditorium April 9 at 2:30 p. m. There will be movies and good speakers. This meeting is free to the public, and it is hoped that the attendance will be good.

The Juniors will hold their meeting in the home of the Junior Activity Chairman, Mrs. Flannery on Thursday afternoon at 4:30 p. m.

A report of the District meeting was given by Mrs. Baldwin. Two articles made by hospitalized veterans, were purchased at this meeting, and same will be disposed of at a later date.

Don't forget the date of our next meeting, Friday April 10. We would like a good turn out.

V.F.W. Americanism Program

Literally hundreds of Americanism activities are conducted by V. F. W. Posts in every section of the country, in cooperation with schools, churches, welfare agencies and similar organizations. It involves a many-sided program among the youth of our nation. It takes into account adult alien residents for whom we conduct Americanization and citizenship classes and other projects designed to assist them in becoming naturalized citizens of this republic. Our local units also work in conjunction with civic and state authorities in the enforcement of law and order and in a constant battle against the forces of crime and lawlessness.

Within the last few years, the Americanism program of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States has been directed towards a particular objective which this year has been incorporated in our eight point legislative program demanded of the 74th Congress during its 1936 session. This proposal includes the prosecution and deportation of communists and other individuals who advocate the overthrow of the government of the United States by force or violence. The V. F. W. believes in political freedom and in the privilege of free speech, but it is unalterably opposed to the mis-use of these privileges as a means of fomenting revolutions.

Hundreds of our schools and colleges have been permeated with communist propaganda and doctrines. Radical student groups have been organized in such schools. Because these groups frequently have the support and guidance of teachers who preach the revolutionary principles of communism, the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, with the cooperation of other patriotic groups, is demanding that an oath of allegiance to the United States Constitution be required of all teachers in public schools and colleges. This demand has been met by state laws making the oath of allegiance from teachers mandatory in more than twenty states, while active campaigns in the remaining states point to the early enactment of similar legislation throughout the entire country.

The V. F. W. also is unanimously supporting a demand for the immediate cessation of all immigration, effective for a period of fifteen years, and the deportation of unnaturalized alien residents, and aliens on public relief. Our organization is convinced that a large share of economic depression of the last several years is due to the fact that America is being forced to feed and clothe literally millions of aliens who rightfully should be the responsibility of their native countries abroad. The unrestricted immigration policies of former years are responsible for the presence in the United States of hundreds of thousands of aliens who gain employment at the expense of American citizens. These alien—and they include artists, motion picture and stage stars and other professional persons as well as laborers—make no attempt to become a part of the country in which they make their livings. They will not become naturalized. Many of them are in this country illegally. The V. F. W. maintains that "America for Americans" embodies a policy that rapidly would solve many of our economic ills, in addition to many of the most perplexing problems having to do with crime and the spread of communism.

The "Personal Touch" In Taxes

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Newspaper-reading Americans are learning the names of a lot of once-unfamiliar taxes these days.

Capital-stock Tax, Undistributed Corporation Reserve Tax, Tonnage Tax, Manufacturers' Excise Tax, Communications Tax, Insurance Tax—those are just a few of the titles with which a tax-conscious Congress is crowding the headlines.

What do they all mean? Let the experts explain. The important fact is that whatever their titles, wherever they are supposed to hit—we, the people, pay the final bill.

Not directly, of course—but in the natural course of events. As economists explain, the industries and other producers whom such levies ostensibly are aimed most to raise the tax money somehow. How? The obvious method is to add it to the price of their products—of the things which the average worker and his wife and children need and must buy.

That's why we are told there's a hidden tax in every railroad fare we pay, in every market basket we carry, in every rent bill we meet, in every suit we wear, in every 'phone call we make, in every mile we drive.

That's why heavy taxes, wherever aimed, boost the cost of living for every worker and consumer—for the overwhelming majority of American families. That's why, regardless of titles, such taxes retain what writers call the "personal touch."

Trick names for taxes can obscure these facts, but they cannot lower the H. C. L. That must be achieved by reducing waste in government—which makes heavy taxes necessary.

Roof Colors in China

In China the use to which a building is put is not indicated by its design but by the color of the tiles used for the roof. Green indicates an official place, yellow a commercial place and brown a place where people live.

Elephant Good Worker

One job in which the elephant seems to have no equal is breaking up the jams of oak logs that occur every few miles in the Menan river of Stam. The hundreds of animals that are engaged in this work not only have the power to push or pull these giant pieces of timber out of tightly held positions, but they are often better than their mahouts in finding the key log that is holding the jam.—Collier's Weekly.

Bernice Van der Vries Candidate For Re-Election

Mrs. Bernice T. Van der Vries, who is a Republican candidate for renomination as representative in the General Assembly from the Seventh Senatorial District, is actively campaigning in the towns composing the vast district which she has represented since the general election of November 1934.

Mrs. Van der Vries in speaking before the voters of the district emphasizes the fact that she voted against the 3 percent sales tax and consistently opposed all other proposed tax increases. Mrs. Van der Vries believes that more economical and efficient relief for the destitute and unemployed could have been provided with the funds available from the 2 percent tax.

Mrs. Van der Vries has devoted much time to the problem of permanent solution of relief and believes that it is one of the important issues which will be before the Assembly when it reconvenes on April 21st.

She also believes that the Permanent Registration Bill, although defeated in the recent special session called for the consideration of that measure, will finally win because an educated and aroused electorate will demand honest elections.

The school people in the district have rallied to Mrs. Van der Vries in her candidacy for renomination, because they realize that their interests were of major concern to her in her legislative work.

She was outspoken in her opposition to the Teachers Resident Bill which would have forced every Chicago teacher residing in the suburbs to move into the city of Chicago and would have compelled them to dispose of their homes at a sacrifice.

She battled for the payment of $7,000,000 deficit to the state school distributive fund. Because of the insistent demands of the members of the Legislature who were interested in better schools, the state distributive fund was increased from $10,500,000 per annum to $13,000,000. This sum is far below that contributed by other states of the union, and one of Mrs. Van der Vries' campaign pledges is her promise to work for a still further increase.

Work will soon begin on the new brick house which Mr. Stringer is building in Lincoln Estates. He expects to move here by June 1st.

BUNDESEN MADE MILK MARKET FOR DAIRYMEN

Pure milk requirements of the Chicago board of health are operating to give Illinois dairy farmers exclusive control of the city's $100,000,000 per year market, it was shown by statistics made public here today.

Substantiating statements made by Herman N. Bundesen, regular Democratic organization primary candidate for governor, figures revealed that sixty-six percent of Chicago's daily consumption of 5,000,000 pounds of milk and cream, now comes from within the boundaries of Illinois. Bundesen is president of the board of health, and is now on a downstate speaking tour.

Only a few years ago, the records showed, less than thirty percent of the city's supply came from Illinois' own dairy farms.

The gain for the state's milk producers is largely accounted for, according to health department officials, by the fact that most out-of-state farms cannot comply with the Chicago requirements, under which all incoming milk must be tuberculin-free. Chicago inspection keeps out inferior milk produced by price-cutting chiselers outside of Illinois.

In an address last night, Candidate Bundesen said:

"I would like to point out that out of 267 milk receiving stations in Wisconsin, Michigan and Indiana, 204 have been eliminated as far as shipments to Chicago are concerned. But no stations within Illinois have been shut off, and several new ones have obtained permits. Thus, our own dairy farmers have been benefited through the Chicago ordinance. There has been an immediate return on the investment dairy farmers have made in order to comply, and it will be an increasing item, because our aim is to have 100 percent Illinois production of Chicago milk if possible.

Bundesen also said that inferior butter from Nebraska and the Dakotas has been shut off. Chicago uses 1,000,000 pounds of this farm product daily.

For years, Bundesen has championed milk as one of the greatest of all health foods. His constant agitation in this direction has greatly increased Chicago consumption. He also classifies as a friend of the dairy farmer from the economic standpoint. It was his refusal to permit a flood of uninspected milk to enter Chicago from out-of-state that ended the milk strike of some months ago. In the settlement of this dispute, dairy farmers received an increase price per hundred.

Dr. Kingston in his capacity of Coroner of Will County has proven his ability to fulfill and perform faithfully the many duties and obligations connected with his office. Dr. Kingston is a man of the highest honor, and in his administration of the office has saved the County several thousand dollars each year by signing death certificates as inquiries and not holding inquests on cases when inquests could have been held, which according to the Statutes is up to the official decision of the Coroner.

Dr. Kingston's Books were audited by Certified Accountants who audited all of the Will County offices and his accounts balanced to the cent. Reports also showed that the documents and records of the Coroner's Office were well kept so all information and details were readily accessible.

Pores in Plant Leaves

Plant leaves vary tremendously in the number of breathing pores per square inch. The greatest difference, it is believed, is between the mistletoe, which has only 200, and the lilac, which has more than 200,000.—Collier's Weekly.

Wait Long for Cremation

It is not unusual for a Dutch family to sell all its property to defray the cost of cremation of the father, to meet the heavy cost in their country. A poor family will scrimp and save for years to provide funds for the ceremonial cremation of a member. Meanwhile, a corpse often reposes in a village graveyard for years waiting the accumulation of the necessary funds. Expense of cremation is sometimes reduced to a minimum by co-operative or mass cremations, at which 50 or 100 bodies are burned in one grand ceremony, and the expense divided pro rata.

Longest Bridge in World

The longest railway bridge in the country, as well as the world, is the Huey Long bridge spanning the Mississippi river north of New Orleans. It is 4.4 miles long with a water span of 3,524 feet, 135 feet above the water at high water. It cost nearly $20,000,000 and required three years to build.

VOTE FOR HERMAN N. BUNDESEN

The Man Who Has Done Something For Illinois Milk Producers

FORMERLY, ILLINOIS FARMERS SOLD ONLY ONE-THIRD OF THE MILK CONSUMED IN CHICAGO. ILLINOIS FARMERS NOW GET NEARLY 70 PER CENT OF THE BUSINESS.

BUNDESEN ACTS FOR ILLINOIS!

As chief of the Board of Health of Chicago, Herman N. Bundesen was concerned with the purity and quality of milk that came in to Chicago. He could have stopped there. But Herman N. Bundesen was interested also in the welfare of Illinois farmers. He felt that the Illinois farmers had a better right to the Chicago milk market than did the farmers of other states—and that Illinois farmers could produce just as good milk or better.

Herman N. Bundesen therefore went into action. And once Bundesen started his drive to help Illinois farmers, he got results. Wisconsin and other states began to lose their unwarranted monopoly of the Chicago milk market which had caused Illinois dairy farmers to suffer.

Today the picture is radically changed—completely reversed—thanks to Herman N. Bundesen.

Today, more than two-thirds of the milk consumed in Chicago, is Illinois milk—produced on Illinois farms. Only one-third—and this is being gradually lessened—comes from Wisconsin and other states. It has been estimated that for each year that Herman N. Bundesen has been able to accomplish this change in the source of Chicago's milk supply, $5,000,000 more than the Illinois dairy farmers would have had, has been added to their income.

Looked at another way, had it not been for Bundesen's policy of favoring the Illinois farmers, these hard-working citizens of Illinois during the recent difficult years, when every penny counted, would have had $5,000,000 less than they did receive.

It is the belief of experts that had not the Chicago market been restored to and preserved for the Illinois farmers, as it was by the courageous action of Herman N. Bundesen, the economic developments of recent years would have wrecked the dairy farming industry of Illinois.

Mokena Folks

Hear Wayland Brooks at Joliet

A large and enthusiastic delegation of Mokena residents motored to Joliet Wednesday evening to hear Wayland Brooks, Republican candidate for gubernatorial nomination deliver a stirring address to an overflow crowd in the Joliet Chamber of Commerce.

After a musical program featuring Harry Kelly's Joliet orchestra and the WLS Sodbusters, Brooks held his big audience tense in a fifty-minute speech which covered Illinois problems from agriculture to "boondoggling."

SCORES FOREIGN IMPORTS

The candidate bitterly attacked an agricultural program which curtailed products local farmers had to sell and at the same time "permitted foreign farmers to unload millions of dollars in foreign products upon our markets and take advantage of prices created by drought conditions."

Further scoring "New Deal Fiscal Policies", Brooks denounced an increase of the National debt "by nearly fifty percent—the principal and interest to be repaid in taxes by every man who eats food, wears clothing, lives in farm or city home or buys the necessities of life."

CLOSING DOWN STATE TOUR

In an interview with the press, Brooks gave an enthusiastic report of his downstate tour. Capacity crowds all over Illinois have turned out to hear him. Brooks pointed out that his tour was accomplishing a two-fold purpose. In fostering his campaign he was also consulting local advisers everywhere to keep himself posted on the peculiar problems of individual localities.

Many Mokena residents took advantage of an opportunity to meet Brooks personally at a reception in his honor given in the Woodruff hotel just prior to his platform appearance. The candidate is no newcomer to Joliet, having resided for many years in DuPage County and having appeared in Joliet and other Will County towns in addresses before local churches, clubs and at various patriotic celebrations.

Mississippi, Missouri Rivers

The two great rivers are sometimes spoken of as the Mississippi-Missouri, which includes the mileage from the source of the Missouri to the mouth of the Mississippi, a distance of 4,220 miles. The Missouri river from its source to its mouth in the Mississippi is 2,945 miles long, while the Mississippi alone, from its source in Minnesota to the Gulf of Mexico, is only 2,486 miles in length.

Tinley Park Garden Club News

ERNA WALLIN, Pub. Chairman

After the routine business was taken care of, the birthday song was sung for Mrs. Florence Anderson and Mrs. E. Baldwin.

Poems were read by Mrs. Swisher and Mrs. Hug. An article, "Get Ready for Maple Syrup Time", was read by Mrs. Duff. Mrs. Baldwin read, "Pussy-willows". Mrs. Wallace Combs read an article on "Greater Garden Display".

A donation was sent to the Washington Red Cross for the flood relief. The Garden Club chartered a bus and traveled en masse, to the Flower Show at Navy Pier on Tuesday March 24. They thoroughly enjoyed the beautiful flowers and other displays.

The Club extends sympathy to Mrs. Werth and family in their recent bereavement.

The hostess served delicious cake and coffee, the cake being decorated with beautiful flowers in icing. Shamrocks were given to each member in memory of St. Patrick's Day.

UNCLE SAM COUNTS LOSS

Washington, D. C.—The United States government, which holds mortgages on about 1,000,000 homes, has begun counting up its losses in the floods which have caused so much destruction in the East. Officials estimated that several hundred homes which had been financed by the Home Owners Loan corporation were badly damaged or swept away. Most of these cases represented total losses; no flood insurance was carried, because none had been obtainable.

Demands Look at AAA Books

Senator Says One Farmer Got $219,825 for Not Raising Hogs.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The federal government paid one hog producer $219,825 of the taxpayers' money for not raising 14,578 hogs, Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan declared, when he introduced a senate resolution demanding from Secretary of Agriculture Wallace the names of all AAA beneficiaries who received in excess of $10,000 in any one year.

"These records are not open to inspection," Senator Vandenberg said. "I suppose it is the only existing secret disbursement of premiums, bonuses or subsidies. We know something about the average benefit payments; but the information is entirely abstract, and except as we know to what extent the general averages are weighted down by large individual payments it is impossible to interpret these statistics. I am not questioning the integrity of the disbursements. I am asking only for information bearing upon the public policy involved."

The senator said that the information would be valuable in connection with study of the new tax bill to raise $500,000,000 a year for benefit payments and $250,000,000 to pay off commitments under the outlawed farm program. The average corn-hog benefit in Iowa was under $400, Senator Vandenberg said, but an unnamed producer with hogs on 445 acres in another state received the $219,825 for not raising hogs.

He said that the average cotton contract was under $1,500, but one producer received $168,000 for not planting 7,000 acres; and that while the average wheat contract in Kansas was approximately $800, one producer received 65 checks totaling $78,638 in two years.

THE CRACKER BARREL

We think we know now what Harry Hopkins meant when he said that critics of New Deal relief spending would never understand the "finer things of life."

In Chicago, the head of a woman's shelter supported by relief funds replaced a 75 cent dinner bell with a Taylor gong, costing $6.00. She explained that the dinner bell "grated" on the women's nerves.

Temperance Forces of Will Co., To Hold 2 Day Meet

The conference of the Temperance Forces of Will County on Sunday-Monday, April 19-20, 1936, Joliet, Illinois, promises to be one of unusual interest. This is one of many similar conferences held in forty-three other counties of the state, during the past eighteen months. Superintendent Charles Haffke states this is in harmony with the plan of the church bodies of the state to unite the precincts of the various counties of the state in opposition to the liquor traffic. Twenty-six denominational protestant church bodies are backing the movement under the leadership of the re-organized Anti-Saloon League.

Reports of conditions locally and over the state will be heard, and the startling debauchery of the youth will be shown—one report showing that out of 4,000 high school pupils in one of the counties of the state, over 60 percent were acquainted with the use of liquor, that drunkenness is increasing with terrific rapidity, that drunken driving is challenging the state and nation. Mr. Haffke states the liquor traffic is busy making 'hay' while the repeal sun shines and is providing jazz jags for youth, candy cocktails for the kindergarteners, whisky drops for women, rum soaked cigars and cigarettes, rum flavored fruits and ice cream, and recipes for kitchen and home. It now seeks its customers from the cradle to the grave.

Special attention will be given to the matter of providing the people with wider opportunity to vote out the liquor traffic under local option elections. People everywhere are resenting the unsavory trend of national and state liquor control. The chilling winds of stern reality after repeal are cooling the heated wet stampede of 1932. The partial public paralysis caused by the "liquor new deal" is rapidly dwindling away before the "raw deal" of actual reality. Former enthusiastic repealers as well as complacent anti-repealers are galvanizing into a movement of such power as may easily reach tidal wave proportions against the liquor traffic.

SYNOPSIS

The Duke, a pleasant, likable youth of twenty-three, jobless and broke, enters an unoccupied summer home in Southampton, seeking shelter from a terrific rain storm. He makes himself at home. Six years ago his father had died in China, leaving the lad, Barry Gilbert, to fight his way back to the States. He did not recollect ever having had a mother. Dozing at the fire-side, he is startled by the arrival of a butler, Willetts; a chauffeur, Evans; a cook and a maid. He learns that the son of the owner of the house, Jack Ridder, whom the servants had never seen, is expected. He decides to bluff it out. His supposed parents have left for Germany. Next morning he is given a letter for his "mother." He opens it and finds a message from the real Jack, saying he could not come, and returning a hundred-dollar bill. The boy's father had pensioned him into obscurity. Barry pockets the money, intending to return it later. He orders Evans to take him to Montauk, intending to disappear there. On the way he assists Judge Hambridge and his daughter, Patricia, whose car had broken down. Believing he is Jack Ridder, she invites him to dinner the following Thursday. Barry returns to Southampton, deciding to stay a bit longer.

He caught Mr. Crowell inspecting the tag sewn onto the back of his waistcoat. Well, that was all right, and, of course, nothing could be wrong when the trousers were to be sent by parcel post to "John Clarke Ridder, Jr." at Southampton. Before the Duke departed, Mr. Crowell had secured orders for a sack suit and evening clothes. "Charge 'em to my father," the Duke said, and Mr. Crowell answered, "Certainly, and I'll let you know when we're ready to try on."

This procedure, and those following at the haberdasher's and the shoe-maker's, ruffled the Duke's conscience far less than the hundred-dollar bill had done. "I'll pay it all back some day," he thought, without asking himself how.

On the return trip to Southampton, it struck him that he'd got a pretty extensive wardrobe for one dinner party. "Well," he argued, "suppose I do stay a month. I might as well be hanged for a sheep as for a lamb, and nothing much can happen before my father's return—unless the real John Clarke Junior changes his mind about writing to Bad Nauheim."

Of course, the Duke might write—to felicitate the old man on having made it up with his boy. What then? That wouldn't tell them that this wasn't the same boy. Still it might be safer to hint to the Hambridges that the Ridders were going to wander about a bit before arriving at their destination.

The Duke leaned back in the Long Island Railway's best parlor car, and opened a newspaper he had bought at the station. Almost instantly, he saw his new friend's name again. "Jefferson Street Condemnation Just Another Grab," the headline ran. "Civic Association Brands Proceedings Before Judge Hambridge as Bare-faced Loot of City Treasury."

"They're certainly making it hot for him," Barry mused.

He wouldn't have read the story, but for its reference to the Judge. Even so, he read it very casually. Somebody wanted to turn a side street into a boulevard. That involved buying a lot of property. And the property owners weren't willing to sell for what the city was willing to pay, so "condemnation proceedings had been instituted"—whatever they might be—and Judge Hambridge was to fix the value of the ground and houses.

"Who really owns this property?" the Civic association asked. The corporation that held title was an obvious stalking-horse. It had been formed, and had purchased the land, and buildings, only a few months before the beginning of municipal interest in Jefferson street. And it was demanding a million and a half for "a few relics of a better day in this neighborhood that would have been dear at half a million." Tammany's paw was visible in the whole transaction, according to the Civic association, and the impending decision called for prompt action from individuals and organizations aware that Judge Hambridge was a Tammany judge.

"Prompt action?" Swell chance! Who cared? Plainly, the tax-payers didn't, and Barry wasn't even a taxpayer. As a couple of million other citizens were to do that evening, he dismissed the whole matter from his mind, and turned the page, looking for a good murder.

Reaching home, he went straight to the library.

The winter covers had been removed from the furniture now, and the place was bright and shining. The Italian box had been filled with cigars. Bending over to get one, the Duke's gaze fell upon an envelope addressed to his other self.

A radio message! His fingers stiffened.

The Judge hadn't waited to write. Damn Marconi! Feverishly, he tore open the wrapper.

"Just to let you know that I am very happy stop couldn't sleep last night for thinking of you home at last stop can't tell your father yet stop please please try to spend summer in such a way as to make reconciliation possible stop praying for word on arrival stop God bless you and love."

"Mother."

For once, the Duke didn't grin. "She didn't care what it cost," he said, but there was no humor in that comment. He was picturing a hurried, heart-hungry woman, slipping furtively up to the wireless room, and handing in this message herself, so that no steward should unwittingly betray her. The first word she had been able to smuggle to the boy in years. "It's been killing your mother," the Judge had said.

The Duke touched a button, and Willetts came.

"Where's Evans?"

"In the garage, sir. With his wife."

"Ask him to run me down to the village. I want to send a telegram to my mother."

"I can telephone it, sir."

"Thanks; I'd rather hand it in."

"Very good, sir. The car'll be here in a minute or two, sir. And I'll hold dinner."

Barry never thought any harder than he did during that short ride.

What could he say that would make his mother still happier, and yet mean nothing if the message fell into the hands of that hard, old man?

In all probability, his father knew the house had been opened. Must know, since he had forbidden Evans to bring his wife. Well, then, suppose the telegram were signed "Willetts," but contained a reference that would identify the real sender—to her, and to no one else?

A Radio Message! His Fingers Stiffened.

"Radio received," he wirelessly at last. "Will do my best. Writing, Willetts."

She would understand.

The reaction came after dinner.

"Maudlin, that's what I am," thought the Duke. "Just because I get a message signed 'Mother.' The first one I ever got."

"Damn fool trick—sending that wireless. Sooner or later, she's going to find out it was fake, and then what good will I have done?"

Thursday's dinner started off on the wrong foot.

The Duke wore his new flannels and his old gray coat. It was not a warm evening, but he had nothing else to wear. His father's apparel was much too tight.

He could see Patricia taking him in. She was lovely in cherry-colored crepe de chine, and the Judge immaculate in black tie and dinner jacket. "You said we could fight things out on the tennis court," the Duke apologized.

"And I'm afraid that stuck in my mind. The truth is my luggage hasn't turned up, and I had to wear anything I could find."

"You should have worn a strip of bunting, and brought boxing gloves," the Judge laughed. "If you and Pat are going at it as you did at the club."

"What would happen if we agreed about anything?" asked Patricia.

"I'd be wrong, Miss Hambridge; I'd be wrong!"

The retort was no more his own than the shirt on his back, but he was rewarded for it by an appreciative flash in the girl's eyes.

But they couldn't agree.

How was it possible, the Duke asked himself afterward, to be so fascinated by a young woman who opposed his every idea and utterance? And so well, so cockily. As though it amused her to be irritating.

The girl chattered about everything. Hard-boiled. A modern, and proud of it. Why should people be proud of being "modern"; a state, like kingship, that you achieved merely by being born? And, so far as modernity was a point of view, why preen yourself because you didn't believe in anything except your own right to be happy?

This girl had had no contact with life. Wallowed about in a pleasant garden, she delivered herself of smart, brittle opinions of conditions she had never experienced, people she had never seen. But you couldn't help liking her. And it began to be evident that she liked him. "You're different, at least," she said. "Different from any other man I know. Really not a bit like a rich man's son."

"I've been on my own a good while," he reminded her.

"Yes," she answered. "You've something to talk about. When my set's through with golf, bridge, the stock market, and the night clubs, it's through!"

Barry learned a good deal about his adopted father that night. And, when Patricia left them for a few minutes, the Judge repeated, "He's certainly no sentimentalist—that gentleman. We're supposed to be friends, and his paper goes on attacking me. The Civic association—that's nothing on earth but The Globe. And now they're all at it, talking about my taking orders from Tammany. Generally, it wouldn't matter, but this Jefferson street business has got everybody so worked up, it's all a man's career's worth just to be caught nodding to a District Leader."

Barry nodded. "Did you ever speak to the old man?"

"Just a few days before he left. I'm running my newspaper for the public," he said.

"What's the use of stopping one paper?" Patricia inquired, entering the room. "The others would keep right on. Did you ever read any of the things they wrote about Abraham Lincoln? Be a brave old gentleman, and don't let it bother you."

She laughed, but her eyes were very tender as she laid her hands on the Judge's shoulders.

"That's why I like her," thought the Duke. "Because I see what she'd be if somebody scraped off the enamel. She's got the makings of some girl!"

It was after midnight when Barry climbed into his car, calling back, "Remember, you're dining with me next Thursday!"

"You certainly took father out of himself," the girl had remarked to him. "He's been frightfully depressed."

"Let's see a lot of one another," the Duke had rejoined. "I'm lonely as an oyster in a church stew. Why not come to my place next Thursday?"

"All right. And we're having house guests over the following week-end. The Winslows. My mother was Mrs. Winslow's sister. Peter's a prominent lawyer, and it won't hurt you to know him. And I've got an old school friend coming from Boston. Will you dine with us again that Friday?"

"I'll board with you, if you ask me!" Barry replied exuberantly. "But that lets me out," he vowed, on the way home. "This can't go on forever. Something's sure to break, and I don't want it to break anywhere near that girl. What she learns when I'm gone won't hurt either of us, but—Gosh—I'd hate having to face her after she'd found out the truth!"

However, Southampton was not only ruining his "appetite for baked beans"; it was ruining his taste for the open road, and rough-necks.

Standing before the mirror, in faultless evening dress, on Thursday, he thought the thing out. "If I can't get a white-collar job with these clothes, and the new feeling this thing has given me, I'm a wash-out. I'd like to make good now. Darned if I know why, but I would!"

He made up his mind to go to town the next day, and have another try at it. "I'll take a shot at the movie studios," he said. "There ought to be something in heroes for a young fellow who looks like that."

He was still contemplating himself in the glass, with a view to his picture possibilities, when the Hambridges arrived.

On the whole, it was a very successful evening. The Judge seemed even more worried than he had been a week before, but Barry's good humor was irresistible. Patricia had asked about his experience in Florida, and he found himself combining purely imaginary adventures there with anecdotes of park benches and the flop house in New York. He told of arriving, penniless at Southampton and of the providential hundred-dollar bill that came addressed to his mother. Truth and fiction blended so wonderfully, and seemed so real.

The Hambridges went home early, but in much better spirits than they had brought with them, and Patricia paused at the door to remind him of their engagement for the following Friday. "You'll have to come the week after that, too," she said. "My Boston friend can't get here next week, and she's especially anxious to meet you."

Patricia must have written about him, then. By Golly, he would get that job—if only to show her that he could do something better than dance.

It was twenty minutes later before the Duke realized suddenly that the exigencies of the situation weren't going to allow his showing Pat anything but a clean pair of heels.

Barry's first two days in town were fruitless. There weren't many studios in New York, and they didn't seem to be doing much. "Acting isn't a man's job, anyway," said the Duke. "Painting your face, and putting a feather in your hat! I'm going to look over the 'Business Opportunities' in the newspapers."

Most of them were opportunities to part with a little money. But Barry didn't give up hope.

The "Laughing Jackass"

Strangers to Australia may hear what sounds like the braying of a jackass in the woods. Investigation, however, will disclose a sassy-looking, colorful bird on the order of the kingfisher, but much larger. It is the kookaburra, native to Australia, one of the brightest and most mischievous birds living. It is known as the "laughing jackass," because of its braying note, and as the "settler's clock," because it utters its peculiar cry regularly at dawn and at dusk. It eats insects, snakes and small mammals, killing the larger prey by flying high with its victim in its beak and dropping it to destruction.

Washington, D. C.

Washington.—The President's latest message to congress, asking more than a billion and a half in new money to spend on relief as he sees fit has caused political thunder to rumble again. It has brought out in the open much of the undercurrent of gossip that has been going on about political racketeering with federal funds and it has brought into sharp relief, just ahead of the spring campaigning, the fact that the federal government has used something like $8,000,000,000 under the guise of relief since President Roosevelt took office.

Naturally, the situation is immersed in politics. All of the charges that were flung at Mr. Roosevelt during previous sessions of congress when he had requested that he be given, as he was given, blank checks on the treasury, have been revived. In addition, new accusations and disclosures of petty graft and political machinations have been dug up and flaunted in the face of the New Deal leaders. More and more of these are coming to the surface and there is no longer any question that throughout the relief organization there is politics. This is true notwithstanding the strongly worded statement by Mr. Roosevelt that politics was not to figure in the administration of relief in any way.

All of this leads up to the conclusion that whenever the federal government horns in on administrative affairs of states, counties or municipalities, the organization becomes so extensive that it is impossible for those at the top in Washington to know what goes on. It is but another way of saying that the federal government ought to confine itself to federal affairs, matters of national scope instead of attempting to supersede the local governments in any function.

Since we are heading into a campaign in which Mr. Roosevelt is seeking re-election, his opposition is making much of two phases of the spending and relief situations. They are stressing the waste that they charge has permeated every phase of the relief effort in the last three years as well as the waste that has taken place in the countless alphabetical agencies that Mr. Roosevelt has built up in the federal government.

The relief machinery, Roosevelt opponents claim, has been converted into a gigantic political machine, the chief object of which is to re-elect Mr. Roosevelt. They claim as well that there has been created a bureaucracy that makes us, as individuals, responsible to a thousand little dictators who act as prosecution, judge and jury over our every coming and going.

All of these are harsh accusations but there is enough evidence available now to make it appear that there is, at least, some truth upon which such charges can be based.

Of course, politicians will magnify all phases of every subject which they discuss. The opposition will make the crimes look heinous and the administration spokesmen will make everything look pure. Neither one is justified in going quite to the extent of the indicated trend. It seems to me that voters ought not be fully convinced by either side but that they ought to examine the picture from the local viewpoint where the evidence is first-hand and where the people who did a good job or who were guilty of fraud or corruption are known to the voters. Then, if in November the election results for the whole country show a preponderance one way or another, the voters will have established their will as being either in favor of or definitely opposed to management of such things from Washington.

There are 3,071 counties in the United States. In nearly every one of them, there are a

More Politics

Republican and a Democratic county chairman. In many of the counties the Democratic county chairmen are trying to use the WPA and its relief setup for political advantage. In an equal number of counties Republican county chairmen are watching for and reporting irregularities. There can be no doubt, therefore, that the charges about relief being used politically will increase in number as the campaign progresses if there is ground for the charges. So, it is made to appear that the local voters will have a complete picture of conditions upon which to base their judgment.

Two recent instances where important individuals have called attention to alleged corruption and political maneuvering under guidance of relief leaders serve to support the contention I have just advanced that the local communities will have complete facts before them. I refer to the charges by Senator Holt, Democrat, of West Virginia, that the whole relief organization in his state is honey-combed with politics and the bitter attack by Governor Pinchot, Pennsylvania Republican, upon what he called the manhandling of relief administration in the state in which he formerly was the chief executive. Relief Administrator Hopkins, with the aid of politicians, has denied these charges in toto. Senator Holt called the Hopkins denial a whitewash of his own appointees and Mr. Pinchot turned loose a fresh fire.

This sort of thing probably will develop in every state in the Union.

I referred to the Presidential message asking an additional billion and a half for relief. This would not have created quite so much of a storm had it not followed closely on the heels of the White House request for new taxes. The combination of taxes and an additional appropriation to be used as previous blank checks have been used by Mr. Roosevelt to the President and those who, while they may support him for re-election, are not in accord with some of his policies, to make public statements of their positions to a better advantage than was possible before. If they had been able only to oppose relief, administration supporters could have accused them of being opposed to the relief of destitute. To put taxes and a blank check together simply offers additional ammunition and a good many members of congress will use it before the new relief appropriation is voted.

I think there is no doubt that Mr. Roosevelt will get the money but there will be a great deal of accusing and denying, respectively, before the vote is taken. That will be necessary in order to "make a record" upon which senators and representatives can seek re-election. When Mr. Roosevelt was voted $4,880,000,000 a year ago, his opponents threw up their hands and said that "you can't beat $4,880,000,000 for re-election." Now, one hears observations frequently expressed that while "you can't beat $4,880,000,000 for re-election," it is entirely possible that $4,880,000,000 plus almost that much more may beat itself. In other words, I have attempted here to present a comprehensive analysis of the pros and cons in order to show that since politics has crept in, has permeated the relief setup, the AAA organization and other New Deal agencies, it is entirely possible for a reaction to develop whereby the vast sum of money would be the cause of defeat rather than the cause of re-election for Mr. Roosevelt.

I am making no election prediction. That would be utterly foolish. What I have sought to do, however, plainly and simply, is to show how local communities are going to rule the roost to a greater extent in the 1936 election than usually is the case. Much is being made of the President's proposal to tax the surpluses of corporations. I have hitherto reported to you something of the nature of the tax proposals but there have been developments that bring the subject again to the fore. One of these, perhaps the most interesting one, is differences that have arisen between men who are supposed to be the President's closest advisers. Professor Raymond Moley, now a magazine editor, lately criticized the tax plan most vigorously in his publication. At the same time, attention was directed here to the recorded attitude of Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell. Professor Tugwell published a book called "The Industrial Decline" not so long ago and in that volume he advocated the control of capital by the "driving of corporate surpluses into the open investment market" by taxation. These two views simply cannot be reconciled and yet they came from two individuals who have been very close to Mr. Roosevelt in an advisory way ever since Mr. Roosevelt entered the White House.

Professor Moley takes the position, editorially, that if, during the depression, American industry had been stripped of all surpluses, few of even the greatest corporations could have survived. He regards surpluses as life insurance policies for corporations and holds the conviction that unless a corporation is permitted to retain funds as it sees fit, it cannot protect itself when our economic structure goes into a tailspin such as that through which we have been passing. The difference in viewpoint of these two men shows a sad state of confusion among the "economic planners of the more abundant life," and demonstrates, among other things, that Professor Tugwell still has very great influence with the President. While we have not heard many of Professor Tugwell's speeches lately, and it is probably true, as publicly stated by the opposition, that Professor Tugwell has been muzzled for the period of the campaign, there are many things being done under Presidential orders that have their origin in the Tugwell brain. He is proceeding merrily on his way with the Resettlement Administration program, of which he is head, and has 14,000 employees on his pay roll. All of which seems to indicate that while Professor Tugwell will not make any more speeches calling upon farmers and laborers to ally themselves against "our common enemy," he is still a very effective member of the New Deal administration.

Cleveland Swapped Fancy

Dinner for Corned Beef

During his bachelor days at the White House, President Cleveland once sat down to an elaborate dinner—served by the faithful William Sinclair—when a familiar odor came in through the window.

"William, what is that smell?" asked Cleveland.

"I am very sorry, sir, but that is the smell of the servants' dinner," replied William.

"What is it—corned beef and cabbage?"

William confirmed the suspicion and the President said:

"Well, William, take this dinner down to the servants and bring their dinner to me."

"And," said Cleveland later—the story is in Denis Tilden Lynch's biography of Cleveland—"I had the best dinner I had had for months."—Kansas City Star.

After First Look, Dumb-bell

Longed to Look for Life

It is true that once in a while, at a dinner, for instance, a woman is put next to a man who stolidly stares at his plate and answers "yes" or "no" to everything she says, writes Emily Post in the New York Herald Tribune.

I remember one occasion when a certain very attractive young woman struggled throughout the soup course and the fish course and half-way through the meat course without getting so much as a glance in her direction. Finally she said firmly:

"Will you please turn your head and look at me?"

He turned a face that was quite blank unless slightly raised eyebrows meant a glimmer of inquiry.

"I want to be sure you know," said she, "that I've tried my best to talk to you, and now I'm going to try no more."

Whereupon she turned to the man on the other side.

The end of this incident sounds like fiction, but I vouch for its truth. She is now the wife of the first man.

Science Is After Those

Other Vampires, the Bats

Science has been investigating the vampire bat recently, in an effort to cope with tropical diseases which are transmitted by its bite. Captive specimens have been kept under observation, and it has been found that they do not suck their victims' blood, as was supposed, but lap it up with their tongues as it comes from the tiny wound made by their long, sharp teeth.

The bats are so skilled in attack that you don't know you've been bitten. Men will go on sleeping peacefully while the vampire bat drinks their blood, though, as has been proved by experiment, they will start up awake at the slightest touch of the finest hypodermic needle.—Answers Magazine.

NEW KITCHEN STOVE MAKES ITS OWN GAS

Housewives Marvel at Coleman Range That Lights Instantly Like City Gas—Cooks a Meal with 2c Worth of Fuel

A new kitchen range that offers every cooking convenience of the finest city gas range is now available to housewives, wherever they live.

W. C. Coleman, pioneer inventor of gas-pressure appliances, brings to a lifetime of inventive genius his crowning achievement in this amazing new Coleman Safety Range. This new stove makes its own gas from ordinary, lead-free gasoline. A patented method of carburization converts liquid fuel into gas, much the same as in present day automobile engines.

The Coleman Range lights instantly, like city gas. Its fuel-saving Band-A-Blu Burners, another of Mr. Coleman's outstanding developments, produce a clean, clear-blue flame, so hot that a low flame does all ordinary cooking. Tests show an average family meal for five takes about 2c worth of fuel.

Coleman Ranges are finished in gleaming porcelain enamel. Their pleasing colors combine outstanding beauty with unequalled performance.

Readers of this paper wishing full information about these wonderful new Coleman Ranges will receive beautifully illustrated literature and a valuable stove check chart by simply addressing a postcard to Mr. W. C. Coleman, Dept. WU-236, Wichita, Kansas.—Adv.

For Example

The case before the court had been going on for many days, and concerned a claim that involved wearisome technicalities. Things were not improved when a counsel made a speech of unnecessary length. He said:

"Then, my lord, comes the question of bags; they might have been full bags or half-full bags; or, again, my lord, they might have been empty bags."

"Or," interrupted the sorely tried judge, "they might have been wind-bags."

"Sorry, my boy," remarked the producer, "but I couldn't do this—it's too long for the stage."

"But, I say," expostulated Screeves, "surely a little thing like that could be fixed up—couldn't you lengthen the stage a bit?"
